MEXICAN OIL MOVED NAVIES OF THE ALLIES

(Correspondence Associated Press) MEXICO CITY, Sept. 19.—A stupendous array of figures greets the investigator who attempts to ascertain how much oil has been conveyed from Mexico during the past few years and what the profits are to those who have ventured to sink fortunes in an effort to tap the petroleum deposits that are known to underlie certain portions of the republic.

AMUSEMENTS MARY PICKFORD AT BUTLER TODAY.

Mary Pickford, it is safe to say, has never in the whole course of her career had a more charming story as a vehicle than her latest Arcturion offering, "Captain Kid, Jr." which will be the headline attraction at the Butler today. In this picture a story of hidden treasure forms the nucleus for a plot as whimsically pleasing as Barrie and as full of genuine humor as any of the old time Hoyt comedies.

THE INVESTIGATION INTO HOARDING HERE IS AT A COMPLETE STANDSTILL.

The investigation into hoarding here is at a complete standstill. It is feared, therefore, by many that this investigation will go the way of the draft slacker, bomb outrage and liquor investigations, which were begun with a great deal of talk and excitement to appease public opinion, but gradually were dropped and scarcely heard of afterward.

FAME IS TO NOTORIETY WHAT THE REAL TURTLE IS TO THE MOCK.

Fame is to notoriety what the real turtle is to the mock. Shots from the pulpit usually pass over the heads of the sinners in the first row. If the donkey were the king of the brute creation some men might truthfully boast of their royal blood.

LOTS OF NOISE LITTLE ACTION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Administration officials are advising the public to be patient and not expect too much or too sudden results from the efforts they are making to reduce the high cost of living. The president himself advises patience. How the campaign of Attorney General Palmer on the profiteers is working out in some parts of the public ledger of Philadelphia, a newspaper friendly to the administration, The Ledger says the cost of living is as high as before and intimates that after a great stir and excitement the investigation into hoarding is to be dropped quietly. "Almost a month has passed," says the Ledger, "since the government began its agitation against food hoarders and profiteers, but the cost of living in Philadelphia today, according to prominent merchants and experts is as high as before if not higher. In this city the first instructions from the United States attorney general to proceed with 'vigorous action' against the extorters were received at the office of Francis Fisher Kane, United States district attorney, August 7. Since that time nothing has been done by the department of justice that has had the slightest tendency to reduce the living cost. The only 'action' taken by local federal authorities thus far has consisted of a seizure of quantities of chickens and calves from a storage warehouse two weeks ago on the charge that they had been kept in storage over the legal time. The greater part of the stocks seized was fit for consumption, and it is the contention of some unbiased experts that this one lone outburst of activity on the part of the department of justice may have increased rather than decreased the price of meat if the federal agent had left the meat in storage, they say, it might have been placed on the market. By holding the foodstuffs the authorities to an extent are helping the profiteers in keeping prices at an abnormally high level. Judging from what little Mr. Kane was willing to say yesterday,
